善導の『観経疏』「散善義」からの引用

原文の書き下し：又た云わく、「若念仏者」とより、下「生諸仏家」に至るまで已来は、正しく念仏三昧の功能超絶して、実に雑善をして比類とすることを得るに非ざることを顕す。即ち其に五あり。一つには、弥陀仏の名を専念することを明かす。二つには、能念の人を指讚することを明かす。三つには、若し能く相續して念仏する者、此の人、甚だ希有なりとす、更に物として以て之に方ぶべきことなきことを明かす。故に「芬陀利」を引きて喩えとす。「分陀利」と言うは、「人中の好華」と名づく、亦た「希有華」と名づく、亦た「人中の上上華」と名づく、亦た「人中の妙好華」と名づく。此の華、相伝えて「蔡華」と名づくる、是れなり。若し念仏の者は、即ち是れ人中の好人なり。人中の妙好人なり、人中の上上人なり、人中の希有人なり、人中の最勝人なり。四つには、弥陀の名を専念すれば、即ち観音・勢至常に随いて影護したまうこと、亦た親友・知識の如くなることを明かすなり。五つには、今生に既に此の益を蒙れり。命を捨てて即ち諸仏の家に入らん、即ち浄土是なり。彼に到りて長時に法を聞き、歴時供養せん。因円に果満ず。道場の座、あに賒ならんやということを明かす。已上

DTS: Again, the Master says: The passage between “If the nenbutsu devotees” and “they are born in the Buddha families” elucidates the merit of the nenbutsu-samādhi as to how unequalled it is in comparison with that which is gained by practicing adulterated good works.

The passage is divisible into five sections:

1. The first clarifies the Name of Amida Buddha which is to be made the exclusive subject of thought.

2. The second singles out the devotee who thinks of the Name and who is therefore praised.

3. The third illustrates how rare such people are who constantly devote themselves to the nenbutsu. They are so rare that there is nothing comparable to them. For this reason, a simile is sought among the lotus flowers, and these people are called the punḍarīka of human beings. The punḍarīka is a rare flower. So the devotees above mentioned are to be named the most wonderful fine flowers of humanity. In China these flowers are traditionally connected with the sacred tortoise. The nenbutsu devotees are really the finest specimens of humanity; they are wonderfully fine; they are the best of the best; they are the rarest; they are the most excellent humans.

4. This tells us that those devotees who single-mindedly pronounce the Name of Amida are always followed and protected—like the shadow following the object—by Kannon and Seishi (Avalokiteśvara and Mahāsthāmaprāpta) as if the latter were their good friends and guides.

5. Those devotees are already, in their present life, recipients of such benefits, and at their death they enter into the families of all Buddhas, which are no other than the Pure Land. When they reach there, they will for a long, long time listen to the Dharma, serve the Buddhas, and make offerings to them. When thus the efficient cause is fulfilled, the effect follows. How then can the seats in the Hall of Bodhi be far away? (pp. 157-158)

CWS: The passage from The person of the nembutsu to is born in the home of the Buddhas clearly reveals that the virtue of the nembutsu-samadhi is completely transcendent; truly it allows no comparison with sundry good practices. In this, five points are clarified: First, the practice of saying the Name of Amida Buddha alone.

Second, the person who says the Name is singled out and praised.

Third, the person who continues in the nembutsu is a truly rare person; there is nothing that compares with such a one. For this reason, the white lotus is used as an analogy. The white lotus is called “the excellent flower among people,” or “the rare flower,” or “the best among the best,” or “the wondrous excellent flower.” What has traditionally been called the “blossom bearing the white tortoise” is none other than this flower. The person of the nembutsu is the excellent person among people, the wondrous, excellent person, the best among the best, the rare person, the very finest person.

Fourth, the person who practices the saying of the Name of Amida alone is protected by Avalokiteśvara and Mahāsthāmaprāpta, who accompany him or her constantly, as shadows do things. They are like close friends and true teachers.

Fifth, already in this life, the person has received this benefit. Thus, when life ends, that person immediately enters the home of all the Buddhas; this is the Pure Land. Attaining that land, that person listens long to the dharma and travels to the lands of the Buddhas to pay homage. Since the cause has been completed, the result will be fulfilled. How could the seat of enlightenment be far distant? (p. 121)

Inagaki: He also says: The passage from “those who are mindful of the Buddha” to “will be born into the family of the Buddhas” clarifies that the merit of the Nembutsu samādhi surpasses anything else; it cannot be compared with merit of various good acts. This passage is divided into five sections: First, exclusive recitation of Amida Buddha’s Name is presented. Second, the persons who recite the Name are praised. Third, those who continuously practice the Nembutsu are described as extremely rare; nothing can be compared with them, and so punḍarīka (lotus flower) is used as an analogy. Punḍarīka is called the “excellent flower” among human beings; it is also called the “rare flower”; also “the very best flower”; and it is also called the “wonderful, excellent flower” among human beings. This flower has traditionally been called “auspicious flower.”

Practitioners of the Nembutsu are “excellent people” among human beings, “wonderful, excellent people” among human beings, “the very best people” among human beings, “rare people” among human beings, and “the most excellent people” among human beings.

Fourth, when you singlemindedly recite Amida’s Name, Avalokiteśvara and Mahāsthāmaprāpta will always follow you and protect you, just as shadows follow objects. They are like your close friends and teachers.

Fifth, already in this life you receive such benefit. At the end of your life you will enter the family of the Buddhas, that is, the Pure Land. After you have arrived there, you will hear the Dharma for a long time and visit other Buddha lands to make offerings to the Buddhas. Thus the cause and result of Buddhahood are accomplished. How can the seat of enlightenment be far away? (pp. 131-132)

Yamamoto: Also lines are, which say: “From ‘if one directs one’s thought toward the Buddha’ down to ‘will be born in the abodes of all Buddhas’ rightly shows that the virtue of the Buddha Meditation Samadhi surpasses all, standing indeed clear above compared with the mixed virtues. And there are five. First, it shows we should call on the name of Amita Buddha. Second, it shows the praise of one who says the Nembutsu. Third, it shows that one who continually calls on His Name is rare and there is nothing to compare with this. So it is compared to the ‘white lotus’ The ‘white lotus’ is made to stand as the best flower of men. It is also said the ‘rarest flower’. And it is said the ‘best of the best flowers of men’. And it is said the ‘wonderful of the flowers of men’. People speak of this flower for one to the other and say ‘Tsai-hua’. One who says the Nembutsu is of men the ‘best’; of men the ‘wonderful best’; of men the ‘best of the best’; of men the ‘rare’; of men the ‘most superb’. Fourthly, it tells that as one exclusively calls on His Name, Avalokitesvara and Mahasthamaprapta always follow and like shadows to forms protect and that they are like intimate friends and the Good Teachers of the Way. Fifthly, it shows that one already gains this gain in this life; and abandoning life, one at once enters the abode of all Buddhas, which is the Pure Land. Arriving there, for long times one hears the Law, travels all the lands of all Buddhas, offering alms. The cause is perfect and the fruit perfect. How could the seat of Bodhi be far off? (p. 135)

Further, he states, “The passage from ‘If one does the nenbutsu’ down to ‘born in the home of the myriad Buddhas’ truly clarifies that the effects of the nenbutsu samādhi are incomparably excellent and really cannot be compared at all with the sundry good practices. That is to say, the passage has five parts. The first clarifies that one exclusively keeps in mind Amida Buddha’s name. The second clarifies the pointing out and praising the person who is able to keep [the name] in mind. The third clarifies that those people who can continue doing the nenbutsu are held to be extremely rare, such that there is nothing that can compare with them. Therefore, it makes reference to the puṇḍarīka as a metaphor. The puṇḍarīka is referred to as the good flower among people and also as the rare flower among people. It is also referred to as the most superior flower among people and the wondrous flower among people. Regarding this flower, it has been relayed that this is the flower that is referred to as the flower of Cai 蔡. Those people who do the nenbutsu are good people among people, wondrous people among people, most superior people among people, rare people among people, and the most excellent people among people. Fourth, it clarifies that when one exclusively keeps in mind Amida's name, then Kannon and Seishi always follow one like a shadow, also just as though they were good friends and teachers. Fifth it clarifies that in this life one already receives these benefits, so when one abandons one's life, one immediately enters into the home of the myriad Buddhas, which is the Pure Land. Having reached there, over a long period of time, one will listen to the Dharma and visit Buddhas, paying homage to them. Since the cause is perfect, the effect is complete. How could the seat of enlightenment be far off?

原文の書き下し：王日休の云わく、「我、『無量寿経』を聞くに、「衆生、是の仏名を聞きて信心歓喜せんこと乃至一念せんもの、彼の国に生まれんと願ずれば、即ち往生を得、不退転に住す」と。「不退転」は、梵語には之を「阿惟越致」と謂う。『法華経』には、謂わく、弥勒菩薩の所得の報地なり。一念往生、便ち弥勒に同じ。仏語虚しからず。此の『経』は、寔に往生の徑術、脱苦の神方なり。皆信受すべし」と。已上

DTS: Ōnichikyū says: “As I read The Sūtra of Eternal Life, I find that if all beings who hear the name of this Buddha awaken faith, are gladdened, desire even for one thought to be born in the Pure Land, they will be born there and abide in the stage of non-retrogression. The term “non-retrogression” is avaivartika in Sanskrit. This corresponds to the Land of Recompense which, as related in The Saddharma-puṇḍarīka Sūtra, is attained by Bodhisattva Maitreya. When the birth is gained by virtue of one thought, one is like Maitreya himself. The Buddha's word is never an empty one. This Sūtra is indeed the one that teaches the shortest cut to the Pure Land and the wonderful means of liberating oneself from sufferings. You are all to believe and accept this.” (p. 158)

CWS: Wang Jih-hsiu states: “As I reflect on the Sutra of Immeasurable Life, I find that sentient beings, as they hear the Name, realize even one thought-moment of shinjin and joy, and aspiring to be born in that land, they then attain birth and dwell in the stage of nonretrogression. “The stage of nonretrogression” is avaivartika in Sanskrit. The Lotus Sutra states that this is the stage of fulfillment attained by Bodhisattva Maitreya. The birth attained in one thought-moment is, as such, the same as [the stage of] Maitreya. The Buddha's words are not empty. The Sutra of Immeasurable Life is truly the shortest path to attainment of birth, the superlative means to liberation from suffering. All people should embrace [its teaching]. (p. 121)

Inagaki: Wang Jih-hsiu says: "I read in the Sutra on the Buddha of Infinite Life, "All sentient beings who having heard his Name rejoice in faith and are mindful of him even once, aspiring to be born there, will attain birth and dwell in the stage of non-retrogression." "The stage of non-retrogression" is avaivartika in Sanskrit. The Lotus Sutra (Saddharmapundarika-sūtra) says "[it is] the stage of reward attained by Bodhisattva Maitreya." Those who attain birth through a single thought of mindfulness are the same as Maitreya. The Buddha's words are not spoken in vain. The Sutra on the Buddha of Infinite Life is truly the shortest way to birth, the divine method of eliminating suffering. All should accept it in faith." (p. 132)

Yamamoto: Wang-jih-hsui says: "I look into the Muryojukyo. This says: 'If there are beings who hear the name of this Buddha, blissfully trust in him, and think of him once, desiring to be born in his land, such will be born in his land and attain there the Unretrogressive State'. 'Unretrogressive State' answers to 'Avinivartaniya' in Sanskrit. This answers to the 'Recompense Land of Bodhisattva Maitreya', as according to the Saddharmapundarika Sutra. By one thought one gets born. This is as in the case of Maitreya. The Buddha's word cannot be false. This sutra is truly a channel through which one can be born in the Pure Land. It is a divine prescription to get away from sorrow. All should believe in". (pp. 135-36)

Wang Rixiu states, "I have heard the Sutra on Immeasurable Life which states that those sentient beings who hear the name of this Buddha, accept it in their hearts and feel joy over its message for even one thought moment, because they aspire to be born in that country are immediately born there and abide in the stage of non-retrogression. The stage of non-retrogression is referred to as the vaivartika in Sanskrit. In the Lotus Sutra it is said to be the stage of fulfillment that is attained by Maitreya Bodhisattva. Those who are born [in the Pure Land] for one thought moment are just the same as Maiteya. The Buddha's words are not empty. The sutra is truly the shortcut to birth [in the Pure Land] and the wondrous method for being freed from suffering. All should accept this.
